

The Story of Dog Rocks

Years ago, a girlfriend of mine in Australia picked up Max, a cute little cocker spaniel puppy. She was under the impression, and so convinced her husband, that Max would go 'potty' anywhere except their beautiful green lawn. The lawn would be fine and they could continue their happy life with beautiful lush lawns and fantastic summer barbeques.

Everything was grand, until the spots arrived. Yellow spots everywhere, ruining the lawn.

Her husband loved the lush green lawn in the good old days, and was having a hard time maintaining a potentially lush and blemish free lawn.

Something had to change. She tried numerous remedies to no avail. The burn marks kept popping up.

After countless hours and weeks of research, a friend of hers told her about a natural rock that was used in the maintenance of grass. This fascinated her, so after hours of further research surfing the net and making millions of phone calls she found a quarry in Australia with a rock that possessed a high paramagnetic count.

Further research revealed personnel at the quarry were already using the mined rocks on their dogs with absolutely no problems. Revived and excited, she obtained some samples and immediately began the years of testing. With the help of Max, and all of his neighborhood and family dog friends, so began the evolution of dog rocks.

After 3 years of burn free lawns and healthy dogs, she started Dog Rocks.

No more scorching of the lawn... just a fantastic carpet of green grass. Max and his friends had tested the water and the results were amazing.... Beautiful lawns and healthy pets.

Dog Rocks do not change the ph balance of water or urine. A change in your dog's p/h balance may increase the risk of kidney or bladder stones. This is a unique, completely natural product that filters out excess nitrates and ammonia from water.

Paramagnetism is a physical force. It is scientifically recognized in physic books all over the world. By positioning and introducing paramagnetic rocks in relationship to other natural elements, one can control growth.

Dog Rocks are made from naturally occurring paramagnetic igneous rock, which is known to increase Boron, Barium, Manganese and Strontium while decreasing tin levels in water.

Dog Rocks are an all-Australian, organic, 100 % natural product. It comes from the earth and eventually goes back to the earth.

It is unique in that to date, it is the only rock like this with these properties and results and the one quarry is the only source it can be found at.

It is sold in Australia, New Zealand, and the U.K.

It has been 15 months since Dog Rocks has been on the market in Australia, New Zealand and the UK.

We are now introducing it to the States.
